

Dinner Tonight!
Multi-County Cooking School

Looking for recipes that are quick, economical, and nutritious? Well, look no further, Texas A & M AgriLife Extension has the answer! A Dinner Tonight Cooking School is being held at the Fletcher Warren Civic Center in Greenville on Tuesday, October 15, 2013 from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. It is being hosted by Family & Consumer Sciences Agents, Denita Young – Rains County, Johanna Hicks – Hopkins County, Mary Sue Cole – Hunt County, and Angie Monk – Wood County.

Agents will demonstrate several of the recipes featured in the cookbook, which is being provided by Hunt Regional Medical Center and AgriLand Mortgage. The Texas Beef Council and Brookshires are also helping sponsor this event. Attendees will also have the opportunity to visit with the vendors that will be set up selling wonderful items that will help jump-start your holiday shopping. Participants will receive a cookbook and gift bag with their $20.00 registration fee. The seats are limited to the first 200 registrants, so register today!

For more information or to get a Registration Form, please contact the Texas A & M AgriLife Extension office at 903-473-4580 or email us at rains.agrilife.org.